Can America Survive an Obama Nation?

On February 10, 2007, Sen. Barack Hussein Obama (D-Ill.) entered the race for the White House. Obama, a freshman senator and rising party star, officially announced his candidacy after forming an exploratory committee to begin raising money and hiring staff to campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination to succeed Republican President George W. Bush.

Obama, who gave the keynote address at the 2004 Democratic convention before he was elected to the U.S. Senate, recently appeared on a Time magazine cover and drew big crowds while campaigning for Democrats in 2006. Obama has stoked enthusiasm among Democrats looking for a fresh alternative to Hillary Rodham Clinton, who some fear could be too polarizing to win a general election campaign against a Republican in 2008.

Sen. Obama has promised to "change our politics" with a campaign that could make him the first African American president in U.S. history. The question is: "What kind of 'change' would America experience if Obama were elected president?"

For a comprehensive expose' on Sen. Barack Hussein Obama's background read the article by the Rev. Rob Schenck of the National Clergy Council.

Recently, the political and religious left has been actively attempting to redefine "social justice" to refer to other issues at the exclusion of the greatest holocaust the world has ever known.

Abortion kills over 3200 Americans per day, and 1.2 million per year. A child is killed by abortion every 22 seconds in America. Over 45 million Americans have lost their lives to abortion since 1973. 50 million babies are killed worldwide every year. This crisis deserves the utmost attention of our policy makers, and leaders.

The fundamental right to life of every American must be our nation's first priority. It must be a top priority for anyone running for President - including Sen. Obama.

Christians for Social Justice shares the concern for other social justice issues like poverty, education, health care, fair wages, and the war in Iraq. However, America will not make progress on these important issues without addressing the wholesale slaughter of the pre-born.

Obama trivializes abortion by his attempt to find consensus social issues on which to base his campaign. He has a long record that neglects protecting pre-born children. 1452 black babies lose their lives to abortion every day in America. Unbelievably, Obama continues to refuse to address the disproportionate killing of African American babies in their mother's womb. Obama even supports the killing of born and partially born children.

Obama claims to stand for justice but neglects to try to stop abortion. The purpose of this website is to expose the hypocrisy of Presidential candidate Sen. Barack Obama.

For the sake of our nation and our progeny, Sen. Barack Hussein Obama must not become President of the United States
