Walter B. Hoye With Laura Ingraham

Laura Ingraham hosted Walter B. Hoye, founder of the Issues 4 Life Foundation.

Hoye said he got started because the abortion issue is so overwhelming in the black community. He said that since Roe v Wade, one quarter of the black population has been exterminated. He said that most of the abortion clinics in the San Francisco area are in the African-American areas. He said that Barack Obama has not stepped up to the plate on this issue. Hoye said that there isn't life, what else matters? He says that too many churchgoers have bought into the idea that abortion is a political rather than a moral matter. He got involved in the pro-life issue when his son was born prematurely and he realized that such a small baby being aborted was wrong. He said more of the African-American church leaders are getting involved. He said that people can get involved in the "Walk for Life"
