

ADHD Have you tried a Biblical Approach?
www.focuspublishing.com

Subscriber Login
Receive Email Updates

Search WORLD:

Search AP:

CURRENT ISSUE

View WORLD E-zine

On the road again

A day in the life of Mike Huckabee, once and (maybe) future candidate
FULL STORY

Features

Culture Beat

Departments

Thoughts

Classifieds

RSS/Social Networks

WEB EXTRAS

WORLD ARCHIVES

COLUMNISTS

COMMUNITY BLOGS

PODCASTS

MEDIA KIT

CUSTOMER SUPPORT

SUBSCRIBE

STORE

WORLD Magazine
Library powered by Amazon

Term Life Insurance at Savings up to 75%!

Printer Friendly E-mail to Friend Share Article

■ CURRENT ISSUE | "On the road again" May 09, 2009

Straight time

ABORTION: A pro-life Oakland pastor chooses jail over a plea bargain—and leads prisoners to Christ | Lynn Vincent

For 19 days in March and April, Walter Hoye was locked in a cell with 29 other prisoners at the Santa Rita jail near Oakland, Calif. There were times when he wished he could have stayed longer.

When the metal door first clanged shut behind him on March 20, Hoye, 52, decided the space was really more of a cage than a cell. A metal grid penning in prisoners. Fifteen bunks lining two walls. Two toilets and a urinal for all 30 men, and a shower that inmates had gradually transformed into a pornographic shrine.

As Hoye made his way to an empty bunk, a few prisoners, mostly black and Latino, dogged his path. "You smuggle in any drugs, man?" one of them asked.

"No," Hoye said quietly.

FRED GREAVES/GENESIS PHOTOS

ARTICLE CONTINUES BELOW

SAVE 68% OFF THE COVER PRICE OF WORLD AND
GET A FREE HARDCOVER ESV STUDY BIBLE.
Give a gift to a friend, mom, dad, or grad—or enjoy this fine edition for yourself. Subscribe to WORLD today!

Then the veteran inmates left him alone, he told me, except for "one of the brothers who was kind enough to help me make up my bed."

A few minutes later, another man walked over to Hoye's bunk and jabbed his finger at a newspaper he was holding. "This you?" he said, eyeing Hoye skeptically.

Hoye peered at the Oakland Tribune headline: "Anti-abortion pastor chooses jail."

"Yeah, that's me," he said.

In the next moment, the inmate was striding up and down the length of the cell, announcing, "Hey, he don't have to be here! He turned down probation! He doing straight

INTRODUCING
WORLDmag.com
Podcasts

ANNUAL ACCS CONFERENCE
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
JUNE 25-27, 2009
CHARLES COLSON
GEORGE GRANT • MATT WHITLING
DOUGLAS WILSON
REGISTER AT: ACCS.ORG • CONFERENCES
BEFORE APRIL 30 FOR BEST RATES

next degree
MULTNOMAH
UNIVERSITY

Popular Articles FEED

- ▶ Cartoons 4.25
- ▶ The 44th president
- ▶ Cartoons 4.11
- ▶ Miss USA controversy
- ▶ Practical atheism
- ▶ Susan Boyle's example

MORE POPULAR ARTICLES >>

just enough grace
by heather nations
ACWPUBLICATIONS.ORG

WORLD on Twitter FEED

Liberal-leaning Justice Souter is rumored to be leaving the Supreme Court in June, opening a spot for Obama to fill.
About 3 hours ago

New AIDS chief: President Obama names a Clinton era official as global AIDS coordinator
<http://tinyurl.com/c4br98>
About 11 hours ago

An Energy Department aide is believed to have contracted swine flu during Obama administration's recent trip to Mexico.
About 12 hours ago

Obama took questions from all the major news networks last night - CNN, CBS, ABC, NBC -

StudentNewsDaily.com

Logos Bible Software for Bible Study

Learn it! Speak it! Live it!

Free Hardcover ESV Study Bible!

RSS Feed

time for what he believed in!"

It was true: On Feb. 19, Alameda County Superior Court Judge Stuart Hing sentenced Walter Hoye, a Missionary Baptist minister, to 30 days in jail after Hoye refused a plea deal that included three years' probation, a small fine, and an order that he stay at least 100 yards away from Family Planning Specialists, an Oakland abortion clinic.

Passionate about the sky-high abortion rate among African-Americans, Hoye began offering men and women assistance at the clinic in 2006. About one in three Oakland residents is black, compared with a statewide African-American population of 6 percent. And though blacks make up only 12 percent of the U.S. population, they account for one-third of all abortions performed in the United States. More than three in 10 black women abort their unborn children.

According to the 2006 census, deaths now exceed live births among African-Americans. "We're no longer replacing ourselves," Hoye said. "So we're not using terms like holocaust and genocide just to elicit a response. It's the truth."

In response, once a week Hoye stood quietly outside Family Planning Specialists with a sign that said, "Jesus loves you and your baby. Let us help." When people approached the clinic, Hoye would ask their permission to speak with them about abortion alternatives; he also offered them pamphlets describing available help.

In 2007, pro-abortion clinic "escorts" began to show up in groups, surrounding Hoye and impeding his movement. They blocked his sign with sheets of blank cardboard and shouted down his low-key offers of help. When that didn't scare Hoye off, clinic managers lobbied the Oakland city council and in December 2007, the council instituted a "bubble-zone" ordinance applicable within a 100-foot radius of any Oakland abortion clinic. The law made it a crime to "approach within eight feet of any person seeking to enter" a "reproductive health care facility" in order to offer literature, display a sign, or engage in "oral protest, education, or counseling."

"This law is horribly unconstitutional," Hoye said. "It allows abortion clinics to decide which U.S. citizens are allowed to retain their constitutional right to free speech."

Represented by Life Legal Defense Fund (LLDF), Hoye challenged the ordinance in court. The case is still pending, but in May 2008, Oakland public attorneys acting in cooperation with clinic managers charged Hoye with "unlawful approaches" to women, and "force, threat of force, or physical obstruction."

What prosecutors did not know was that LLDF attorneys possessed four hours of uncut videotape documenting Hoye's activities outside the clinic on the dates in question. At trial in January 2009, the tapes impeached the testimony of clinic director Jackie Barbic, who claimed that Hoye repeatedly broke the 8-foot rule and that she and a patient had to put up their hands to fend him off. Instead, the tapes showed Hoye standing still as Barbic approached him; then they showed Hoye walking away. No incident shown on the tape matched Barbic's testimony, and even clinic escorts testified that Hoye was always cordial and never obstructed anyone's path or used threats or force.

Inexplicably, the jury still found Hoye guilty. At sentencing, the prosecutor recommended the probation and the clinic stay-away order—or two years in jail. When Hoye refused the stay-away order, Judge Hing appeared "surprised," Hoye said. "The judge was essentially asking me to stop trying to help men and women outside an abortion clinic, and I just would not voluntarily give up my First Amendment rights."

In February, Hing levied a sentence of 30 days and Hoye reported to the Santa Rita jail a month later. After the newspaper-reading inmate touted the Tribune article to the other prisoners—many of them inner-city drug dealers whose highest aspiration was to stay out of prison, they clamored to know why a man would choose jail over freedom. From that moment on, Hoye found himself in constant demand.

"I would be holding court with about 30 guys, explaining why I did what I did," he said. "I explained what an abortion actually does, that it takes an innocent human life. We held prayer vigils, we had Bible studies. I must have counseled and mentored guys all day and all night. It got to the point where we started talking seriously about Christ."

Most of the men in the cage at first mouthed pro-choice slogans, Hoye said. "But when I forced them to complete the sentence, 'I believe that a woman has a right to choose to kill an innocent life,' they couldn't do it."

One morning at about 2:30 a.m., a good-looking young man named Terrell approached except for FOX.

About 15 hours ago

FOLLOW US ON TWITTER >>

CHRISTIAN CEOs & OWNERS
BUILDING GREAT BUSINESSES FOR A GREATER PURPOSE

www.C12Group.com

THE ARTS & THE TIMES

Now Showing FEED

- ▶ Earth
- ▶ Every Little Step
- ▶ 17 Again
- ▶ Hannah Montana
- ▶ I Love You, Man
- ▶ Duplicity

MORE MOVIE REVIEWS >>

■ WORLD 5 YEARS AGO

Abortion: All the rage
May. 8, 2004

■ WORLD 10 YEARS AGO

Columbine: Teenage martyr
May. 8, 1999

Hoye's bunk and asked what actually goes on during an abortion. Using his fingers to simulate a woman's legs spreading, Hoye showed Terrell how the abortionist inserts a vacuum aspirator and sucks out the developing child.

Terrell, 18, told Hoye he had gotten his girlfriend pregnant and that she had aborted. "She made the decision," he said. "It was her choice."

"Yes, I know that, but what did you do?" Hoye replied. "Did you offer to marry her?"

Terrell shook his head. "No, I didn't."

"Did you offer to help her raise the child?"

"No, I didn't."

"Did you tell her that you love her and that you were going to go the distance with her as a man should, even if she decided to give the child up for adoption?"

"No, no, I didn't," Terrell said, his eyes filling with tears. "I never knew. No one ever told me what an abortion is. No one ever made it plain."

When Terrell understood that he had, "perhaps because of his own lack of participation, been complicit in the murder of his own child, it really broke him," Hoye said.

Before Terrell went back to his own bunk that night, Hoye prayed with him. "I told him God could forgive him, that what he'd done wasn't an unforgivable sin."

But the conversation didn't end then. Terrell continued to visit with Hoye. "He began to understand that men have a responsibility to women, and vowed that, for him, an abortion would never happen again. He came to me a young man in jail for dealing drugs, trying to make some money and live the large life. I began to see him grow up."

Released from jail on April 7, Hoye rejoined his wife, Lori, in their Oakland home. Today, he is not sorry for his choice. "I've been a jail chaplain in jail before, and even had the privilege of being a guest preacher at San Quentin. Being an inmate is completely different. I was actually one of them and it gave me a different kind of credibility. I'm sure my adversary meant my incarceration for evil, but God used it for good."

Copyright © 2009 WORLD Magazine
 Articles cannot be reproduced without permission
 May 09, 2009, Vol. 24, No. 9

WORLD's First Job Fund Donate Now >>

Prayerfully consider donating to our program to expand news-reporting resources by hiring and mentoring young journalists.

1st Year	2nd Year	3rd Year	Our Goal: $750,000
$250K	$500K		